WILLIAMSBURG HIGH SCHOOL

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; older people should be able to participate in the community; older people should be able to access the services they need; and older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment.

2009-2010

Class of 2010

Freshmen Service Week

Serving Locally

The Freshman served our community on Monday and Tuesday with LARRI (Lake-shore Area Regional recovery of Indiana). Wednesday they worked locally in DeMotte and delivered soup to shut-ins. On Thursday they went to Elim and interacted with the children. Friday was spent at Christian Haven helping the maintenance crew on yard work.

Sophomore Service Week

Above: Johanna, Joseph, Daniel, Heidi Dunham, and Grandma Bowers are on kitchen duty after a meal.

Below: A group of guys clean up Camp Tall Turf by raking the areas near the cabins.

Monday-Wednesday we worked at Camp Tall Turt in Michigan. We did a large variety of things from raking to swamp work to painting picnic tables. All of our jobs were designed to make the camp ready for the wave of summer campers.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and the importance of providing them with appropriate services. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health trusts, and the implementation of mental health legislation.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future. The paper will first review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and then discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future.

The current state of mental health services in the UK is characterized by a number of challenges. These include the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, the importance of providing them with appropriate services, and the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems in the future.

The challenges facing mental health services in the future are a number of factors. These include the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, the importance of providing them with appropriate services, and the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems in the future.

The need to address the needs of people with mental health problems is a challenge that will continue to face mental health services in the future. This is because the number of people with a mental health problem is increasing, and the need for appropriate services is growing.

The importance of providing people with mental health problems with appropriate services is another challenge that will continue to face mental health services in the future. This is because people with mental health problems need appropriate services to help them manage their condition and live a normal life.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the community. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out a vision for the future of older people's services. The strategy is based on the following principles: older people should be able to live independently in their own homes; older people should be able to participate in the community; and older people should be able to access the services they need.

The strategy also sets out a number of objectives for the future of older people's services. These include: to improve the quality of life of older people; to reduce the number of older people who are in care homes; to increase the number of older people who are employed; and to increase the number of older people who are active in the community.

The strategy is a key document for the development of older people's services in the UK. It provides a framework for the development of policies and services for older people. It also provides a basis for the evaluation of older people's services.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 12.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has published a strategy for ageing, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the health and quality of life of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) to ensure that older people have access to the services they need; (2) to ensure that older people are able to live independently; (3) to ensure that older people are able to participate in the activities of their communities; and (4) to ensure that older people are able to contribute to society.
